

Autism spectrum disorder (ASD) is a condition of neurobiological origin involving a different configuration of the nervous system and brain functioning.

It affects two areas of personal functioning:

Communication and social interaction

Flexibility of thought and behavior