

It affects different aspects of child development such as language, social functioning, and cognitive development.

It presents a pattern of interests and activities that is characterized by being:

Restricted and repetitive

