

1. As the name implies, ASD is a spectrum: no two people with this condition are alike. It will depend on their personal development, their support networks, their language development, as well as whether they have comorbidity.

